

I Love The Water

I love the water of my state. I live in Louisiana. I want to protect, conserve, and enjoy the water.

I do not throw trash out of the car window because I do not want the trash to get in the bayous, lakes, or ditches. The trash could harm the animals and they could die. I do not throw batteries in the garbage can because they might leak acid into my drinking water. I do not put gasoline in the water. Gasoline would pollute the water.

When I wash my hands, I wet them, put soap on them, and then turn the water off. I turn it off so I do not waste the water. I rub my hands together, then I turn the water back on to rinse the soap off my hands. I take a bath more often than a shower. I do not let the hose pipe run too much water outside.

I swim in water with my sisters. I like to go under the water and hold my breath. It feels good. I drink the water. My favorite drink is kool-aid. I water the plants with the water so they will grow healthy.

Now I have told you ways to protect, conserve, and enjoy the waters of Louisiana. I love the water.
